Mass Intentions: Kilbride.

Saturday 6th 6pm Frank Butler | Jack & Olly O'Neill.

Today, Jesus says, "one's life does not consist of possessions," (Lk 12:15). Jesus' invitation towards a deeper voluntary poverty appropriate to our vocational state in life is embraced as if an embrace of Jesus' own cross, an expression of our own willed sacrificial love in response for receiving the gift of salvation and grace. It is not a retribution for sin from the hand of an angry deity, nor an exercise of spiritual gymnastics, nor the negation of the necessities of life.

The process of detachment is painful because of how tightly we are possessed by those possessions (both material and immaterial), which we rationalized to acquire and, thus, are required to protect and maintain. Our heavily-guarded silos of possessions are indeed large and probably bulging at the seams, while there are those in our immediate spheres whose legitimate physical, spiritual, emotional, relational, or educational needs could be met IF those silos were more like a local garage sale.

Whatever is not given is lost because, as we ourselves must one day die, all that we have clung to, to the very end, will die with us, but what we have given away will escape corruption for it has been sent ahead into eternity.

From another perspective, Jesus' invitation might come to us in the form of a simple question, "Am I not enough for you?"
